ABSTRACT

Literature is part of humanities and humanities include philosophy and history also. These two branches of knowledge provide a kind of pattern for understanding literature. Philosophy and history are two major tools of interpretation of literature and archetypal criticism is based on philosophy and history of a people. Archetypal criticism is synthesis of structural criticism and historical criticism. Archetypal approach is the interpretation of a text in the light of cultural patterns involved in it and these cultural patterns are based on myths and rituals of a race or nation or social group. The archetypal ideas have always been present and defused in human consciousness. Plato was the first philosopher to elaborate this concept as ideal forms. It was Jung who applied term archetypes what he called 'primordial image'. Archetypal criticism is a synthesis of structural criticism and historical criticism. It dissects and analyzes symbols, images and mythologies used by a writer in his works, and these symbols, myths and rituals have their origin in primitive myths, rituals, folk-lore and cultures. Such primitive factors according to Jung lie buried in the "collective unconscious" which may be called "racial memory" of the people. Archetypal study of dramas of Girish Karnad shows that he has re-created and reinterpreted ancient myths, folk-lore, legends and tradition. His dramas are replete with instances of Indian life in its truest essence. He has used tradition, myths, legends and folk-lore and history extensively.

Incubation Centre

The college established an Incubation Centre to incubate new and meaningful ideas which ultimately lead to an enhancement in the operational, administrative and academic quality of the college.

The incubation Centre aims at achieving the following objectives:

- 1) To invite novel and meaningful ideas from all the stakeholders which contributes towards the improvement in the academic and or administrative quality of the college.
- 2) To incubate the novel ideas received from the stakeholders so as to be implimentable.
- 3) To implement the incubated ideas for the overall improvement in the quality culture of the college.
- 4) To prevent the college and systems embedded therein to be frozen over time and to allow them to keep changing to keep pace with the changing environment.

Overview of the CFA Exam

Employability Enhancement Cell

On the backdrop of the general perception that a sizable number of today's graduates are unemployable, the college cannot be a mute spectator/listener thereto. The recently established Incubation Centre received a new idea of setting up a separate cell for the enhancement of employability of our graduates. The cell is expected to do everything that is possible to enhance the employability of the students. As a starting point, it is proposed to create, maintain and update a record of the employment opportunities available specifically to the Arts & Commerce graduates of our college. The idea is not just bringing to the notice of our undergraduate students the various employment opportunities available to them but to enlighten them well in advance about the specific soft & hard skills which they need to acquire while in the undergraduate level to enhance their employability when they turn out to be graduates. Generally students get to know the vivid job requirements only after they start searching for jobs when they can no longer spare time to hone their skills and fulfill those job requirements. It therefore becomes imperative to enlighten them about the various job requirements and soft skills which they must develop to become employable. Such job requirements and soft skills can be better known by referring to the detailed advertisements of various organisations. The Employability Enhancement Cell of the college will therefore gather various job advertisements published by numerous organizations and bring them to the notice of the students so that while graduating itself the students can take cognizance of the various hard and soft skills which are required
